

Women on Boards

Written by Administrator

Friday, 22 June 2012 07:54 - Last Updated Monday, 17 June 2013 13:26

Partner organisation, the European Federation of Black Women Business Leaders recently partnered with Deloitte's Academy to help increase the number of Black Women Business Leaders being nominated for their Women On Boards course.

During a meeting back at the end of last year with Deloitte's MD David Cruickshank, Dr Yvonne Thompson CBE successfully negotiated places on the forthcoming Deloitte's Academy, Women on Boards programme which starts this autumn.

Further to The Lord Davies' Report on 'women on boards', Deloitte is offering an educational and networking programme for women with the ability and ambition to be considered for Non-Executive Director positions at UK listed companies. The programme will build on their knowledge and assurance, and provide opportunities to network with their peer group and senior board members from UK listed companies and City advisers.

Members of the Programme will gain knowledge and understanding of:

Boardroom dynamics;

The challenges facing women in their move to a board position;

The UK Governance framework;

Working with external stakeholders such as members of the investor community;

Women on Boards

Written by Administrator

Friday, 22 June 2012 07:54 - Last Updated Monday, 17 June 2013 13:26

Developing personal brand and impact;

Getting onto a shortlist for director appointments.

Who is the programme for? Senior women with the potential to be considered for a Non-Executive Director position with a UK listed company within the next 12 to 18 months.

More Info visit EFBWBL/women on boards

If you are, or you know a women business leader, corporate or owner that you think should be profiled, please click the link and fill out our My Story In 20 Questions page for our consideration or let us know by contacting us.